Punk design around 1984 was disposable graphics.
A flier needs to last for a show, quickly get a point across, be a collage of what some kid could come up with. This created a truly unique visual language. With that style & attitude came impactful messaging and iconic posters.

In this zine, I wanted to update the messaging to face
some new problems we are facing in these strange uncertain times with that DIY aesthetic.

Special thanks to my friends that helped with this one: Sean Wilson & Katie Beasly.
